A Beautiful Black Mustache Adorns Upper Lip of Bearded Myra, a Western Horse.

Chicago has a horse with a mustache. Early the other day Myra H., out of Queen Myra, by Black Giant, appeared in the city, and wondering citizens stopped to gaze as she high-stepped down the boulevard, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

Bearded Myra, the veterinary surgeons agree, is a phenomenon. On her upper lip is a long black mustache, not a spare thing, made up of a few scattered hairs, but one of heavy, luxuriant growth, like the false affair the villain wears in the play. When left alone it droops gracefully over her mouth and gets in her way when she eats. Myra is the property of F. A. King, of Clinton, Ill. She is coal black all over, with the exception of a single white star on her forehead, a strong, straight-limbed, beautifully-formed animal, and altogether a splendid specimen of horseflesh. Mr. King brought her from Clinton to have two prominent Chicago veterinary surgeons examine the growth on her upper lip, and, if possible, explain its presence there. From here he will take her to San Francisco, where he will remain for the winter.

"Myra was my mother's pet. Mother died recently. I would not part with Myra for a fortune," Mr. King says. "Museum managers have fairly haunted my footsteps, all anxious to buy her. Many surprisingly large offers have been made me, but I would accept none of them. As long as I have money enough to keep her well-fed, well-housed, and well-cared for, Myra and I shall not be parted."

The Chicago veterinary surgeons who have seen the mare are at a loss to account for her mustache.

Occasionally Mr. King has the hostler cover the mare's facial adornment with a black cloth, which effectually conceals it. Then Myra passes up and down the boulevard without attracting more than the most casual glance from the passers-by. She seems to understand this, and enjoying her distinction, dislikes the cloth.

Sometimes, on the other hand, Mr. King orders the hostler to take great pains to "dress" the mustache becomingly. The style that he and Myra like best is the one affected by Emperor William of Germany.

HE WAS LOCKED OUT

Funny Predicament of a Prominent Washington Citizen.

Everybody Laughed at His Discom-fiture, But It Took a Long Time Before He Could See the Fun of It.

Snap! The front door blew shut and a prominent N street citizen was locked out. It was three o'clock in the afternoon and there was no one else at home. This, says the Wash-ington Star, wouldn't have mattered much but for the fact that it had been a warm afternoon. The prominent citizen had removed his clothing and slipped on pajamas; he had come downstairs to look at the thermom-eter and find out just how hot it really was—and there he was in his own vestibule with nothing on but pajamas, with the inside door locked behind him and the public highway filled with pedestrians and equipages in front of him.

He quickly closed the outside door and leaned against the wall to think it over. Three o'clock! No one could possibly get home before five! Two hours of suspense! And then he discovered it was exceedingly warm in the vestibule; warmer, in fact, than the hot room upstairs, which he had thought stifling, and to learn the approximate temperature of which he had gotten himself into this predicament.

"I am a man of sound mind and body," he said to himself, "and have spent my life coping with emergencies. There is no use worrying over a little accident like this. I will solve the difficulty. Not only that, but I will deliver myself from this dilemma unaided. It would never do to let Maria know. I would never hear the last of it. I must compose myself and think. I must reason out some way of getting back into the house or safely around to the back door."

But Mr. Prominent Citizen found it hard to concentrate his mind in a temperature of 95. He was soon mopping his brow with the sleeve of his pajamas and swearing and kicking at the door. He also scraped the skin off his toes and bruised and scratched his hands trying to force the door open against its will and determination to stay shut. He even wished he had not been so particular about burglar-proof locks.

Finally he shouted. A few people whom he could see through the crack in the outer door stopped in front of his house and eyed it critically and wagged their heads, as much as to say:

"There's something crooked going on in there," and then passed on. Vainly the thoroughly enraged man yelled to his neighbors. They, too, must have been lying down, for there was no response.

For two terrible hours he raved and fumed, and then he did a daring thing. Watching his chance when there were no women and but few men on the street, he flung the outer door open, sprang into the porch of his next-door neighbor and jabbed furiously three or four times at the electric push button. Then, before the astonished onlookers could recover their surprise, he darted back into his own vestibule.

Joy! At last! His neighbor's door opened. With a glad cry the prisoner yelled: "Come over here. I need your help." The neighbor came and heard the awful story. He was considerate enough not to laugh, and without comment went to the back of the house, where he broke open a window, and in due time rescued his pajamaed neighbor.

He was sworn to secrecy, but he betrayed his trust, and now a whole neighborhood is laughing at the episode, and the prominent citizen is beginning to see the funny side of it.

Marlin
32 Cal. High-Pressure Smokeless
IN MODEL 1893

WE are prepared to furnish our full line of Model '93 rifles, solid and take-down, for the new .32 Caliber HIGH PRESSURE SMOKELESS cartridge. This size uses a 165-grain bullet and has a velocity of over 2,000 feet per second, making it the most powerful cartridge made for an American arm, with the exception of the .30-40 U. S. Army. It is sufficiently deadly for any game known in North America.

Another great advantage is that the barrels are bored and rifled (but not chambered) exactly the same as the regular .32-40 Marlin, one turn in 16 inches. This makes the use of black powder and lead bullets as satisfactory and convenient as in a regular black powder rifle.

This size is the first high-pressure arm developed in this country for a caliber larger than .30, and the first to use a slow enough twist to give best results with black powder ammunition.

Prices same as .30-30 MARLIN. 120-page cat log of rifles, shot-guns, ammunition, etc., cover in 8 colors, mailed for three stamps.
